Commissioner Lopez and Mr. Gruenfeld provided a detailed overview on the development. Among the questions asked, Commissioner Lopez and Mr. Gruenfeld clarified that the $2.7 million was earmarked for affordable development, the on-site office will provide wrap-around services to the residents via organizations determined by State, this development is considered as part of the Brownfield program with a tax credit of about $6 million, and applicants will be selected based on the building's marketing plan (including lottery information). Yonkers approved this development accommodating people ages 62 and up, whereas intergenerational developments are for people 55 and up (per State guidelines). Lastly, the transfer goes to the developers and afterwards to the IDA since they issued the pilot. Commissioner Lopez and Mr. Gruenfeld made note of inquiring about electric vehicle charging stations on the property and if parking spaces could be made available to nearby residents due to parking difficulty in the area. Additionally, concerns were raised over the low project cost per unit and a request was made that, if possible, contracts should address those concerns.

Commissioner Lopez and Mr. Gruenfeld provided a detailed overview on the development. Among the questions asked, Commissioner Lopez and Mr. Gruenfeld clarified that there is an expectation that they would be requesting flex funds (used for any gap in building the affordable units), the budget for affordable housing allows the deferred developer fee as a way of putting money back on the property (similar to regular properties) and the County IDA does not require prevailing wage however there are some additional standards included. Commissioner Lopez and Mr. Gruenfeld made note of inquiring about electric vehicle charging stations on the property, local hiring requirements, the terms of the pilot that the Village of Ossining had agreed to and whether or not there is formal communication about the feasibility of this property being completed by the developers.
