Mr. Simons said that since there have been no changes to the maps, that he was attending the meeting primarily to answer any questions and listen to input. Ms. Meany and Ms. Perez addressed the committee and said that their preliminary review of the maps lead them to believe that they look good, however they're withholding their final position until the lines are finalized. County Attorney Nonna said they didn't have anything to add and were just listening today. Legislator Cunzio reiterated her request to have individual meetings with Mr. Simons. Legislator Nolan spoke about specific changes and requests related to his legislative district (LD) and a discussion on communities of interest and commonalities ensued. Mr Simons said that he's unsure if theres explicit commonality between West Yonkers and Eastchester, but at the end of the day they have to create equitable districts where peoples votes count the same. Legislator Cunzio asked who was responsible for directing Mr. Simons on specific changed and Mr. Simons reiterated that his single point of contact was Chief of Staff Montalto. Legislator Borgia added that throughout this process no one legislator will get everything they want, but they still have to create a consensus that the majority of people will be ok with, and a discussion ensued on the challenges that have made this process challenging. Legislator Nolan asked when this process began, and Legislator Boykin said that it began last year. However, it needed to be significantly retooled because of enabling legislation passed at the state and federal level and further discussion ensued on specific changes to the proposed lines. Mr. Simons noted that the lines don't go into effect immediately, and that specific lines sometimes had to do more with the changes to communities of interest and changes in neighboring districts, before further discussion on specific changes to LDs. Ms. Meany said that the League of Women has followed this process for last 1.5 years and thanked the Board of Legislators for their work. She wanted to remind everyone that they're looking out for their voters. Vice-Chair Gashi raised a point about the proposed lines and the effect they had on school districts, to which Legislator Borgia spoke about the situation in her district with school districts being split and said having more than one legislator per school district isn't necessarily a bad thing, with further discussion on school districts ensuing. Mr. Simons commented that sometimes changes can cause unforeseen effects on neighboring districts, in turn creating a ripple effect.
